my lot to be transferred to the 103d Infantry, composed of troops from Maine, New Hampshire and as many Vermonters as were in any one outfit except the Ammunition train. Then came the dreary drill days.

Chaplain Moody then spoke of his visits to Privates Herron and Sanborn in the hospital and how he later met Sgt. Knapp, for whom the Post was named, and at his suggestion Knapp visited the boys at the hospital. "The last thing Knapp ever did for me," said the speaker, "was to visit these two sick men."

Mr. Moody said one came to realize that the ties and fellowship of the war are closer than any in the world. "You shared your dugout with a man; you shared danger with him; and you and I can testify to the seriousness of those days. Why were those days glorious? We were separated from those we loved, but we felt with Rupert Brooke that we had a rendezvous with death. There was the uncertainty of food, shelter, and even life. There was the uncertainty of our future plans. But it was glorious because we knew right well that something had lifted us to nobler purposes. We knew that we were committed to a cause that could not fail. I found men sometimes didn't understand the causes of the war. As I came in close contact with them I came to realize that their reasoning might not always have been sound, but their hearts were true. The country had called them and they responded."

"We may never again wear a medal or the 'Croix de Guerre', but there is a greater service lying ahead of us. The whole world is passing through a crucial period. We are getting away from the period of reaction, and are coming back to a recognition of where we are and what is wanted of us. There is a need to serve our country now with just as much enthusiasm and whole-hearted sacrifice as when we served under the Colors. If we voted as cheerfully as we drilled, if we paid our taxes without evasion, and participated in town and state affairs with the same spirit of patriotism we had in the war then we would be giving real service to our country."

There are as great days ahead of us as in the past and we must get the right attitude and stand with the American Legion for the things that are the best."

Chaplain Moody's address was followed by the presentation to Commander Powell by Arthur F. Stone of a purse of over $2,000 which the Caledonian-Record has raised for a memorial tablet to the St. Johnsbury soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the great war. Mr. Stone referred in his brief address to the fact that the local paper demonstrated its usefulness to the community not only in disseminating news, but in promoting any enterprise that advanced the community's interest.

Commander Powell acknowledged the gift and accepted it on behalf of the Legion in the following words: "It is wonderful to see for one's country."

It is glorious to die for one's country."

That the people of this town have contributed the sum just presented to the efforts of the Evening-Caledonian-Record for the erection of a Memorial to those of our "Ruddies" who "went west" in the great struggle, shows truly the spirit of sympathy in this community of the efforts of the men who sacrificed themselves for the spirit of American Liberty should never die. As citizens, we are bound with the common tie of memory. You who have contributed to this memorial have made this memory everlasting.

We desire to express our heartiest thanks to each and every one who had a part in the gift of this fund; those who conceived the idea of the memorial, those who contributed, and the Evening Caledonian-Record for collection.

W. R. Knapp Post of the American Legion assures you that it accepts this fund as a trust which will cease only when the memorial is erected and fittingly dedicated, as the expression of your appreciation to the men who served and came back and most of all to the sacrifice of those who will never come back but live.

"In the gleam of the evening star In the wood note wild and the laughter of a child And in all the sweet things that are, And you'll never die, our wonderful boys While life is noble and true For all our beauty and hope, and joys We will owe to our lads like you."

Service Lieut. Fred M. Caswell, U. S. A., said he was here as the substitute for his chief, Col. Astell, the National Chaplain of the War department. Lieut. Caswell said the War department was not only creating an entirely new Army, but that the Army had undertaken another scheme, Americanization work, and they were teaching the illiterate real Americanism. At Camp Upton there are 1,500 learning the English language and other accomplishments. The government is trying to fight radicalism by education. Both the Legion and the government are working on similar lines for Americanization. The radicals have called the American Legion the anti-pow of capitalism, but we know that the American Legion is the one force that has put down the radical element. The American Legion does not believe in pardoning the radicals now in prison, but believes that more of them should be behind the bars.

The last speaker of the occasion was W. Allen Fletcher of Johnson, Adjutant of the Vermont department of the American Legion. Mr. Fletcher had just returned from attending the Adjutants' conference at Indianapolis and brought back many impressions of that gathering and the recent national convention of the American Legion at Cleveland. He said the country was facing some serious problems. In the South the colored race furnished a difficult problem, and on the Pacific coast the Japanese question is sure to be a most perplexing one. Throughout the United States is the spread of Bolshevism. Mr. Fletcher then spoke of the plan of the veterans of Louisiana to overthrow the state government and take things into their own hands, and said that it was an American Legion man that discovered the plot and prevented it from being carried into execution. Referring to the Japanese question of the Pacific coast he said that 700,000 of 900,000 acres of the best farm lands in California were held by the Japanese, and if the problem was not met sooner or later this country would see a repetition of the days of '96.

and this problem must be approached with due regard to the rights of all and that the cooperation of every citizen of every color and creed is needed. He referred to the killing of four ex-service men in the parade in the state of North Carolina, and of the recent bomb explosion in Wall Street, and said that the American Legion is the only organization that can lead our moral support to the civil liberties problem, which is a well known fact. our disabled comrades. There are thousands of them—some in town poorhouses, some in homes for the feeble-minded, and others in other public institutions. It is a crime that our government did not arrange to take care of those who came back disabled. The American Legion's great job, and we are going after it, is to get a just recompense for the disabled comrades.

The exercises closed with prayer by Rev. George A. Martin and the benediction by Rev. Chauncey A. Adams, the ex-chaplain, of Danville.

ORLEANS

Miss Moffat of Boston, who has been assisting in the care of the Turnbull family has returned to Boston.

Miss Mae Wheeler of Westmore has been visiting her friend, Miss Lucy Hancock.

The Military ball given Thursday evening under the auspices of the American Legion was a grand success. The New Harmony Orchestra rendered a fine concert from 8 until 9 when dancing was indulged in until 1:00. The hall was profusely and tastefully decorated befitting the occasion. Refreshments were served and a good crowd in attendance.

Mrs. Vera Badger and son who have been visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Harris, for several weeks have gone to their home in Ohio.

They many friends of Randolph Turnbull and daughter are glad to know they are making good progress for recovery after a two months serious illness.

Mrs. Griffin of Barton who has been a patient at the Cleasby hospital, has so far recovered as to go to her home.

Mrs. Lucy Twombly, an old time resident of this place passed away at Mrs. Harvey's Sanatorium at St. Johnsbury where she has been tenderly cared for the past two years. The funeral was held Sunday at A. E. Ordways on Union St., conducted by Rev. R. A. Hamilton of the Congregational church. Burial in Pleasant View cemetery beside her husband and two sons.

Mrs. Dean Corley and son of Colebrook, N. H., are spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Mary Ordway before going to her new home in Greenfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Sargent and daughter, Doris, who started two weeks ago for Florida by automobile have returned home going as far as Southern Pines, N. C. El. Morrill, a former resident of this place, returned with them for a brief visit among friends.

Harold McNamara and wife were in St. Johnsbury the first of the week to visit his parents and to see his brother, Roger, who was home from camp on a few days' furlough.

New Brokerage Firm

Opens in Newport

The Newport Brokerage Co., is a new industry which has opened up for business on Central street in the Newland building occupying the shop vacated by J. R. Davis.

The new firm of Moore and Blanchard, P. C. Blanchard and John A. Moore, of which John A. Moore is the working partner, will do all kinds of upholstering and repairing of furniture, and will also buy and sell second hand house furnishings. Jack has inherited his father's ability as a cabinet maker and has made and sold many choice articles of superior workmanship and fine finish.

That there is a demand for a business of this kind is evident as many orders have already been placed with them.

Brotherhood Class of M. E. Church Gives Supper

The Brotherhood class of the Methodist church rounded up $140 as the result of their rummage sale and fish chowder supper on Wednesday. The sale opened with a rush at eight in the morning and the bargains offered were soon snapped up by eager buyers. Much of the stock was new, while other things were just as good as new.

The rummage sale under the able direction of L. O. Drew, chairman, with P. H. Stanley and Emery Wilkins as able assistants, who cleaned up $100 as their share of the day's work. Goods remaining until night were closed out at auction, and then the fun began. Such bargains will never be seen in Newport again.

P. H. Stanley, the Brotherhood treasurer, is a past master in the art of convincing people from their money and to hypnotized his audience that one man and his wife were found to be leading again a cash offer. Some members of the Brotherhood with an eye to business, brought straw hats, hats for all seasons, and clothes enough to last for generations.

Over 100 sat down to the fine supper which was under the leadership of Perry Lawson, who had charge of the kitchen. C. I. Moore of the dining room and Milo F. Bacon, head waiter.

But no general ever won a battle without risks and these chairman weekly acknowledge and appreciate the services of Mrs. Lillia Wood, and Mrs. Annie Magoon, who made the fish chowder and all the ladies of the church who came to their assistance.

The committee in charge of the whole affair was E. A. Hamilton, C. I. Moore, P. W. Lawson, L. O. Drew, Dr. L. H. McIver and E. L. Richards ex-officio.
